Creation: 8 May 1988 Vice-Chancellor’s Advisory Committee meeting

Abolition:
Administrative history note: On 18 May 1988 the Vice-Chancellor’s Advisory Committee approved the creation of the Centre for Public Health within the faculties of Medicine and Professional Studies. The main aim of the Centre was "to mobilise multidisciplinary resources in the development of educational programs for health personnel, and to coordinate and develop research and development programs in the public health field". Dr G. K. Rawson was appointed as the Centre’s first director.
On 2 December 1996 Council resolved to disestablish the Faculty of Professional Studies from 1 January 1997 (resolution CL96/88/3). Consequently the Centre became the sole responsibility of the Faculty of Medicine from this date.
In August 2002 contact was made with the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Research) regarding the disestablishment of the Centre. This appears to have occurred shortly afterwards, although the official closure date does not appear to be documented (file 990228).
