Agency number: 425
Start date: 1995
End date: 2007
Creation: 31 October 1994 Council meeting (resolution CL94/86c)
Abolition: 6 February 2007 Academic Board papers

Administrative history note:

On 31 October 1994 Council created the Department of Chinese & Indonesian within the School of Modern Language Studies in the Faculty of Arts & Social Sciences with effect from 1 January 1995 (resolution CL94/86c). The first head of department was Associate Professor David Reeve.

On 3 July 2001 the Academic Board recommended that the department be renamed the Department of Chinese and Indonesian Studies (resolution AB01/34).

As part of a Faculty of Arts restructure, the School of Modern Language Studies was re-named the School of Languages and Linguistics effective 31 January 2007 (6 February 2007 Academic Board papers). As part of this restructure, it was also deemed that no school was to establish a "departmental structure" ("Principles of Government-Feb 2007" in SRF - Faculty of Arts & Social Sciences) and "discipline advisors" were instead created for each area of study. Therefore the Department of Chinese & Indonesian Studies as an independent entity ceased to exist from this date.
