Administrative history note:
The Professorial Board first recommended the establishment of "a School of Western European Languages...under a Professor of French or German" at its 12 September 1961 meeting (resolution 61/238i). It was not, however, until 12 November 1962 (resolution 62/182vi) that Council appointed Dr Judith Robinson as the first Professor of French and head of the School of Western European Languages within the Faculty of Arts. She commenced duty on 17 February 1963 and so the Department of French came into being.

On 22 January 1968 Council abolished the School of Western European Languages and created in its place the three independent schools of French, German and Spanish (resolution 68/9).
